THOSE SUPPERING BABIES.

Yesterday was the hottest day for years the thermometer registering one hundred at the moment of the heat's greatest intensity. It was impossible for anyone in New York to entirely escape the discomof calorie. But the poor suffering children 1800, who lay in their hot cots, with the fire of fever adding to the warmth which the atmosphere conveyed, were the most pitiable victims of the day.

Help them, if you have bowels of compassion at all. Send some small contribution to the Free Doctors' Fund, which generous souls have already given such a good impens to.

Remember, as you read of the needs of those aching, friendless children, that you are as responsible for their welfare as any others in this community. The warm-hearted men and women who have sent so liberally of their means, or who have given modest donations, drawn from a modest income, had no more reason to come to the assistance of the little sufferers than you have.

Humanity should impel you to do this charity. Of course, you are free to contribute or not. There is no coercion. But can you feel quite content to let your fellow-men, who are no better able than You to lend a helping hand, show a tender, generous spirit of aid for the poor babies while you shut your eyes to the painful spectacle and your cars to the whether she should wear an advocate's robe, low wailings of the lit'le suffer re? Contribute your mite like a man.

A GOOD FOINT.

Cardinal GIBBONS thinks Sunday should not be a day from which all amusement that one robe was enough. It was therefore or innocent recreation ought to be banished. He regards it as a day of rest and an advocate's yown, but should appear in by rest is not meant absolute inactivity.

He says with great wisdom that it would be a good thing for the art museums and public libraries to be thrown open on Sunday. Hosts of poor people, who are unable to visit them during the week on account of the necessity for laboring throughout the day would be able on prove it by visiting the treasures in the

The mad-doc scare is cetting to be a minds should no longer have their imaginations aroused by wild fairy tales about the dreadful horrors of mad buting dogs.

Connecticut is in a panic over canines. When a dog shows unmistakable signs of labies it is reasonable enough for those bitten by it to take every presaution against the bad effects of the virus. But to become terrorized over every mp of a snappish, ill-humo ed dog is not reason able, and it is absurd to stimulate the imagination of excitable persons by stories of mad dogs which are largely founded on

A Frenchman has discovered a new explosive which is almost devilish in its character. It is a condensed bloomfied gas, one drop of which volatilizes instantaneou-ly when dropped in the breech of a gun, and without noise, without smoke, sends the bullet tearing on its mission of death. Well, the worse they make war of themthe more likelihood of peace. That is one comfort.
